

HEALTHY HOME BUILDERS

As Seen In
Westchester County Business Journal
July 8, 2013
Visitors Per Month: 150,000

Photo 2: From left, Healthy Home specialists Matt DaRin, indoor air quality expert; Peter Donovan, construction manager; and Gary Stromberg, solar and geothermal HVAC specialist.

HEALTHY HOME BUILDERS

hosted a "Sneak Peek – Open House" June 25, at 8 Kent Road in Scarsdale, to educate consumers about new, healthier options in home building. In the process of being built by Healthy Home Builders, the residence features state-of-the-art systems for clean, whole-house indoor air and water purification and filtration, energy efficiency with geothermal and solar HVAC and the use of building materials that are either nontoxic or substantially less toxic than traditionally used construction products. The shingle-style residence takes a traditional approach to design, with an elegant exterior, refined interior and a thoughtful flow of spaces from one room to the next. The home will incorporate reclaimed hardwood flooring and vintage architectural elements with state-of-the-art systems to maximize energy efficiency, water conservation and purity, and above all, indoor air quality, which dramatically reduces respiratory illness and exposure to household dust and chemical residues that are often present in carpeting, furniture and other home products. For more information about Healthy Home Builders, visit healthyhomebuilders.com.

Photo 3: The new "healthy home" currently under construction at 8 Kent Road in Scarsdale.
Photo Credit: Christopher Banuchi.